FIREFIGHT

Fireorders

- Accurate fire
- Contact
- Suppressing fire

Accurate fire

Once accurate fire have been declared, the soldier will shoot at identified, specified and visible enemy. His weapon should be put on semi auto mode, and will only take the next shot once the last one lands and hits. In one fireteam, soldiers shoot alternatively, taking turns. This fireorder is perfect for ammo conserving but provides extremely ineffective fire against enemy forces.

Contact

Contact fire order is the general procedure for a firefight. The soldier shoots at identified, specified enemy. His weapon put on semi auto, taking shots in 3-5 second intervals. In a fireteam, everyone will be assigned to a sector called, right flank, center, left flank. They take up the firefight in these defined sectors.

Suppressing fire

Suppressing fire is used to control an area or enemy group. The soldier fires at identified target. The weapon put onto semi auto / auto depending on the situation. He takes shots in a manner to limit and deter any movement on the assigned target. This fire order takes a lot ammo to upkeep, but its extremely effective. It should be used only in case of emergency.

Formations

Formations are used according to terrain. Formations are a general, and they should be interpreted with the terrain in mind. Use logical judgement when using formations.

Marching formations

We use marching orders when we are on the move.

- Convoy formation
- Herringbone formation
- Bounding overwatch
- Travelling overwatch
- Diamond formation
- Column formation
- Line formation

Firefight formations

- Wedge formation
- Right echelon formation
- Left echelon formation
- Fireline
- Baseline
- Security (360)

Camouflage and cover

Every soldier needs to constantly scan his environment for camouflage and cover, and should take positions up around these things when taking contact.

Camouflage

Camouflage hides the soldier, but doesn't offer any protection for him.

Cover

Cover offers safety against enemy fire. Its effectiveness depends on the enemy's firepower capabilities.

Safely getting/bailing out of vehicles

Dismounting and mounting up a vehicle is something every soldier should know from head. The procedure for it should be learnt and put into memory.
